

Site Safety

Construction Management

Service Overview:

As part of Edison's project and construction management capability we provide a service to independently monitor and verify site health and safety performance.

As an independent specialist operating in New Zealand's challenging energy sector, Edison provides a site safety service that provides independent verification of project and construction sites.

Our site safety experts have all been drawn from within the industry and have significant technical and hands on experience of construction safety management.

Our staff have witnessed first-hand the practical issues involved in construction, they recognise the importance of practical hazard and risk management, and the realities of on-site communication and collaboration between PCBU's.

Through our experience, Edison will undertake the following on your project:

- Ensure your obligations are met under the Health and Safety at Work Act 2015
- Ensure there are project specific site safety plans meeting industry best practice
- Provide support, guidance, review and monitoring services based on our knowledge, expertise and experience
- Tailor our existing suite of health and safety compliance audits to the specific requirements of your project
- Conduct regular audits and reviews of the project, contractor and subcontractor compliance with site safety requirements.

Industry Experience:

Edison is familiar with a range of industry approaches to health and safety and is closely aligned with the Safety-First principles.

In providing site safety representative services Edison will support the project team to:

- Establish and maintain a positive safety culture for the life of the project
- Review safety plans and documents
- Undertake regular site safety inspections
- Provide regular reporting to the Project Manager on all matters relating to Health and Safety
- Encourage all workers to offer proactive solutions to assist in achieving a safe project
- Recommend safety improvements to the project team

Summary:

Edison provides specialist project and construction site safety expertise to reduce your overall project risk.